

July 8-14, 2007

A thick morning fog in the middle of the week was the most notable weather feature.

Cold nights
made for some silvery and pink early evening
colours
... and
the beasts milled and meandered.

A photograph of a foggy landscape. The foreground shows dark silhouettes of trees against a hazy, light-colored sky. A bright, circular light source, possibly the sun or moon, is visible in the upper left portion of the sky. The overall scene is misty and atmospheric.

A fog rolled across from the north west
on the 10th,
having disrupted
road and air traffic
in Melbourne

A photograph of a rural landscape shrouded in thick fog. In the foreground, there is a grassy area and a dark, paved road. A wooden fence runs across the middle ground. To the left, a tall utility pole stands with several power lines stretching across the top of the frame. The background is completely obscured by the fog, with a faint, blurry structure visible in the distance.

And the developer's flags disappeared!!...well almost..

Bovine milling and meandering as demonstrated by the current major population group on the development site
